ABSTRACT

In a PRACH channel, colliding signals are resolved by use of a number of training-like symbols in the colliding data payloads. The signals are estimated by spatio temporal filters running a training-based or semi-blind algorithm, and a selection criterion 5   is applied to the estimated signals, such as distance from the finite alphabet or the mean square error.